THE PENINSULA HOTELS LAUNCHES
REAL-TIME iPHONE ROOMS RESERVATION APPLICATION

Smart phones and other handheld devices will be the next big thing in hotel bookings as clients seek greater convenience and real-time confirmation while service providers also find more ways to tap a potentially lucrative market segment, The Peninsula Hotels' General Manager for Information Technology Shane Izaks said.

Development of mobile booking applications or platforms is only a small part of far-reaching changes to the way hotels will handle various aspects of guest services in the future, Izaks said.

The Peninsula Hotels is moving in that direction through its iPeninsula mobile booking platform launched in Hong Kong recently.

The service allows customers to make bookings on their iPhones that are then automatically delivered to The Peninsula Hotel's reservations network

"Unlike some mobile booking applications currently in the market which require Reservations' staff to manually input bookings after these are received by e-mail, our platform seamlessly delivers bookings to our reservations system without any manual intervention," he said.

Within the year, these mobile bookings for restaurants and spa will be available as well.
